PERFORMANCE UPDATE

During February, the world's major equity markets showed positive performance. Much of this optimism was fuelled by high growth expectations for the nascent Artificial Intelligence market, causing the share prices of related stocks to soar. The MSCI World index in EUR, including net dividends, rose by 4.6%.

Citadel realised positive performance with a +2.2% return in February. Since inception, Citadel has delivered a return of +166%. During February, the most significant contributors were American Eagle Outfitters (+20%) and Stellantis (+18%), while NOV (-13%) and Signify (-11%) were the largest detractors.

PORTFOLIO NEWS

The flow of annual results announcements remained large throughout February. Below are some highlights:

Stellantis, one of the world's largest and most profitable mainstream carmakers, reported solid profit and cash flow growth for 2023. This is a strong achievement, given the competitive challenges and cost increases the company faced. Management remains humble yet ambitious about the profit and cash flow potential in 2024 and beyond. Despite the impressive performance of its shares, we believe that the stock is still significantly undervalued. Apparently, company management thinks alike and announced a share buyback of €3bn.

Also Dewhurst (elevator components) announced a share buyback program. We view this as highly value accretive, given the clear undervaluation of the shares and the company's cash-rich balance sheet. As a result, the shares were up 12% during the month. Meanwhile, we continue our efforts to try to convince selective companies of the potential benefits of share buybacks.

NOV (equipment for the energy sector) reported robust revenue performance for the fourth quarter but adopted a more cautious stance regarding the outlook for 2024 compared to market expectations. Nevertheless, the company's strong free cash flow growth in 2024 is supporting the stock's valuation.
