PORTFOLIO NEWS

Several portfolio companies released quarterly results or trading updates, offering insights into management's expectations for 2024. Generally, company managements express caution about overall consumer spending this year. Furthermore, forecasting government spending is expected to a challenge due to the multitude of elections worldwide.

An exception to this general picture is MPAC, a manufacturer of packaging machinery primarily used in the food & drink industry and the healthcare sector. MPAC's trading update showed robust 2nd half 2023 results and a record high order book, offering clear visibility for 2024. As a result, its stock price was rewarded with a quite significant re-rating.

In contrast, Signify, the global leader in lighting products, erred on the side of caution. While fourth-quarter results were solid, the outlook for 2024 remains cautious. Fortunately, its management team with a proven track record in relentlessly chasing cost efficiencies, is expected to maximise free cash flow generation in this challenging market. The company anticipates subdued revenue growth in 2024, but improved operating margins, and a robust free cash flow.
