PERFORMANCE UPDATE

October was a positive month for most equity markets, and for Citadel as well. Technology shares performed particularly strongly, driven by several multi-billion-dollar investments by major tech companies in AI-related data centres and related technologies. Time will tell whether these sizeable investments deliver an adequate return and reasonable payback period.

Citadel delivered a solid return of +2.7% in October, bringing the year-to-date performance to +7.2%. The main positive contributors were Samsung Electronics (+28%) and MPAC Group (+25%), while Signify (-7%) and Village Super Market (-14%) were the only notable detractors. Since inception, Citadel has returned +166%.

PORTFOLIO NEWS

Samsung Electronics (leading producer of memory chips and smartphones) reported very strong earnings growth for its third quarter, driven by high demand for memory. There is currently a shortage of both high-end memory semiconductors used in data centres and mid-range memory used in smartphones and PCs. As a result, Samsung's factories are running at full capacity and selling prices have risen significantly. This situation is expected to continue over the coming quarters. Samsung is one of the beneficiaries of the AI investment boom, yet its shares still trade at an attractive valuation.

The share price of MPAC Group (producer of food and pharma packaging machines) recovered in October after the company reported comparatively solid results for the first half of its financial year. Its US business was affected by a significantly lower level of new orders due to uncertainty surrounding trade tariffs. This situation is expected to normalise in due course.

Signify (lighting solutions) also reported quarterly results. These showed healthy demand for its consumer smart-lighting products (the Philips Hue brand), but slower demand in the professional segment. Economic uncertainty also weighed on performance. As a result, the shares fell by 7%.
